Resource of the Month: Counseling Center

The Counseling Center provides services for students who may be experiencing a variety of personal and adjustment issues that require assistance beyond what friends and family can provide. Counseling services are free, confidential, and provided by trained professionals to currently enrolled Texas State students while classes are in session. Counseling Center Services include:

• Brief individual, group, and couples counseling
• Consultation and crisis response
• Workshops about coping with stress and other mental health topics

Majors in English prepare undergraduate and graduate students to pursue further education and/or careers; to think, write, and speak clearly; to produce authoritative scholarship and inspiring creative work; to read with pleasure, skill, and understanding; and to appreciate the power and subtlety of discourse in various media. Faculty in the Department of English teach, conduct research in, and advance the discipline of English Studies, including rhetoric and composition, creative writing, technical communication, film and media studies, literature and language. Sample job titles include Copywriter, Paralegal, Community Relations Director, Author, and Researcher.

The undergraduate majors are English (literature), English with Secondary Teacher Certification, English with a Creative Writing emphasis, and English with a Writing and Rhetoric emphasis. The department’s five minors include English (literature), Writing, Medieval and Renaissance Studies, Media Studies, and Southwestern Studies.
