The Game of the Week in basketball keeps getting more and more intense as the games go on! Teams are starting to find their chemistry and are making things as competitive as ever! Two of the top Greek Fraternity leagues are going at each other this coming Wednesday the 5th. Kappa Alpha Psi (3-0) is looking to keep their perfect record going, while Phi Psi (2-1) is attempting to knock them off their winning streak and keep their playoff hopes alive.

Looking at the stat sheets for both of these teams we really have an awesome game at hand. Kappa Alpha Psi has set themselves apart from the other teams with their offense by averaging nearly 70 points per game, which is the top average out of all fraternities. Kappa Alpha Psi is led by their top scorers Richard Ekeke, who is averaging an astounding 25 points per game, and Captain Jaire Ruffin who has around 13 respectively. Their defense is nothing to play around with either, while being ranked 13th average wise they are still holding opponents to just 45 points.

Regarding Phi Psi’s offense, they are averaging around 45 points per game. Not as stout as their upcoming opponent, but that’s what upsets are made for right? They are led by their top scorers from last week with Ryan Winters having 11 and Marco Balthazar and Matthew Kida both not far behind with 10 each. Phi Psi’s defense is holding their opponents to just under 34 points per game, which in turn might slow down the high powered offense of Kappa Alpha Psi.

Whether you’re a basketball fan or not this game should not be missed by anybody. Come out to the Student Rec Center at 10:00 p.m., support your fellow Texas State students, and witness one crazy game!
