Texas State University-San Marcos
Guidelines for Recruiting and Hiring a Diverse Faculty

Ongoing Department Efforts:

1. Network:
   Continuously network in anticipation of the opening. Expand your opportunities to connect with diverse members of your academic community. Monitor publications and research for potential candidates. Take every opportunity to invite, include and recommend a diverse set of your peers to the university – most notably - in emergency hire and lecturer positions.

2. Build the Adjunct Pool:
   Develop and maintain a large, diverse, and qualified adjunct pool. This pool would provide a generous selection for short-term instructors and would also furnish a list of candidates to appoint as interim instructors in the case of an unsuccessful search.

3. Conduct a Department Needs Assessment:
   Strategic Assessment: Conduct an assessment of the current department needs, determine future needs and give key stakeholders an opportunity to share their perspective. Department members should solicit input from internal and external stakeholders by using interviews, surveys or other appropriate research instruments. The assessment would analyze the gap between the current structure of the position and the future needs of the department. External labor market conditions should be examined including current demographics, lists of recent doctoral recipients, nature of the competition for specialists in this area, etc.

   Diversity Component: The assessment should include an analysis of the current diversity within the department with specific emphasis on current department demographics as well as the diversity of perspective and/or research areas represented. Areas of strength and weaknesses should be identified and used in crafting the recruiting plan.

   Outcome of the Assessment: The results of the department needs assessment provide a structure for the department to develop strategic plans and design faculty position descriptions to meet the established department goals. In addition, the assessment results provide search committees with information necessary to design a recruiting plan, job description and guidelines for screening applicants.
Search Committee Efforts:

Step One: Search Committee Process
Search committee members should be chosen because they reflect diverse perspectives, characteristics and opinions. The committee should adopt a set of ground rules for their discussions that encourages the free exchange of diverse opinions with an expectation that different perspectives will be represented. The committee should agree beforehand on the method of resolving conflicts and reaching agreement.

Step Two: Recruiting Plan
Job Description: The job description consists of at least two essential elements: explanation of the duties to be performed and list of qualifications necessary for consideration. The department and the search committee should look for opportunities to include diversity-related skills, multicultural perspective and/or experience as part of the requirements, especially in positions that include teaching responsibilities. The job description should include a clear list of the requirements necessary for consideration. These requirements represent the standard that will be used in the screening process.

Plan for Distribution of the Announcement: This plan addresses two recruiting goals: 1) to locate applicants that meet the needs identified by the assessment and 2) to attract a large, diverse, high-quality applicant pool. Past recruiting history should be reviewed for strengths and weaknesses.

Assistant Professor Search Committees should make contact with:

- Directors of Graduate programs at regional doctoral granting institutions

- Directors of local and national “Preparing Future Faculty” programs
  Preparing Future Faculty programs by discipline can be located on the web at: http://www.preparing-faculty.org/PFFWeb.Discipline.htm

- Graduate Directors at the leading doctoral-granting institutions that produce the largest numbers of minority PhD’s in the specific discipline

- Directors of graduate minority fellowship programs

Advertising costs can be kept to a minimum by utilizing recruiting sources on the web. Job announcement should be posted on all discipline-specific professional organizations, especially those targeting underrepresented groups.
Step Three: Creating a Standard
The search committee incorporates all the assessment information from key stakeholders to answer the following questions prior to screening any candidates:
1. What criteria will be used to screen candidates?
2. What evidence will the committee accept as proof of the credentials and/or qualifications?
3. What experiences will the committee consider to indicate the candidate has the required knowledge, skills and abilities?

Diversity Notes:
- This process allows the committee to broaden diversity by allowing a wider range of background experiences.
- The real determination of our willingness to be inclusive of all differences lies in our ability to assign value to persons with different backgrounds.
- All hiring decisions represent a balance between keeping the standards high, distributing those standards equitably, and selecting the best-qualified applicant.
- The composition of “the best qualified” is derived from a process of decision-making that places value on a person’s background experiences. These decisions should be made prior to review of any applications and agreed upon by the committee members.

Step Four: Assessing the Candidates
The committee uses the standards agreed upon in Step 3 to screen candidates. Candidates should be screened using only those qualifications listed on the job description. All candidates should be assessed using the same standard. In addition, applicants should be compared against the assessment information, (i.e. how the applicants meet the standard, how the applicants add to the diversity in the department, and how the applicants meet the need identified by the assessment). Care should be taken to avoid comparing applicants against each other.

Step Five: Selection Process
In choosing candidates for interviewing, the committee should indicate the reasons for their selection as well as the reasons other applicants were not selected. These reasons should be based on the screening criteria.
Equity and Access Office
Faculty Hiring Evaluation Checklist

Process Review:
1. Was the PPS (07.01; 07.02) process followed?
2. Was the paperwork submitted to Equity and Access with ample time for review?

Equity Review:
3. Were all candidates held to the same standard?
4. Was the standard consistent with the job description?
5. Did all candidates receive equitable treatment?

Access Review:
6. What was the academic quality of the applicant pool?
7. What was the diversity (personal characteristics) of the applicant pool, if known?
8. What was the depth of the applicant pool: diverse perspectives, knowledge, skills, abilities (KSA's), etc.?

Diversity Review:
9. How does this hire add to the diversity of the department?
   ▪ From an academic and/or professional perspective
   ▪ From a personal background perspective

Department Goal:
10. How does this hire meet the overall needs of the department and university?
Equity and Access Review: Guidelines for Search Committees

Process Review:
- Follow the process as outlined in the appropriate PPS (i.e. 07.02)
- Allow ample time for review
- Communicate early and often with the Office of Equity and Access – we’re here to help.
- Send applicant folders with log.
- Make your assessment visible - use a matrix or chart

Equity Review:
- Hold all applicants to the same standard
- Use criteria listed in the job description
- Make judgments consistent with the criteria when assessing applicants

Access Review:
- Make a commitment to fill a large, diverse pool of qualified candidates.
  - Consciously examine bias and assumptions associated with the search.
  - Create a job description likely to yield a wide and inclusive pool of candidates.
  - Develop a broad description of scholarship, experience and disciplinary background – rather than narrow.
  - Whenever possible, use “preferred” instead of “required” and “should” instead of “must.”
  - Develop an aggressive and comprehensive recruitment plan that uses multiple recruitment strategies, focusing on personal networking and targeted mailings.

Diversity Review:
- Base recruiting and screening process on department assessment.
- Expand the evaluation criteria.
- Prior to the actual screening, determine the evidence you are willing to accept as proof that candidates meet the posted criteria.
