It is often said you must understand the past in order to make sense of the present. The Department of History encourages students to understand the world – and their place within it – by providing courses that span human history and culture. Topics include ancient human civilizations, recent world events, numerous countries and regions, and even specialized courses devoted to the development of arts and culture throughout history. Students are encouraged to choose from a wide variety of courses not only for their future career interests but also for their own personal development.

The department is “dedicated to developing analytical skills and promoting critical thinking,” two highly valued marketable skills. History majors also gain interpersonal, research, and decision-making skills that are valuable in many career fields. Sample job titles include: database/records manager, museum educator, information specialist, archivist, and legislative research assistant.

You can choose from multiple History majors and a History minor:

- Bachelor of Arts in History
- Bachelor of Arts in History with Teacher Certification (One or Two Teaching Fields)
- Bachelor of Arts in History with Social Science Composite Teacher Certification
- History Minor
