Abstract: This talk will focus on efforts to create a measure of students' conjecturing and proving ability. I will begin by reviewing some relevant literature, noting how others have organized such constructs and attempted to measure them. I will also discuss plans to develop this instrument as part of the Dynamic Geometry in Classrooms Project.