GUIDELINES FOR LETTERS OF EVALUATION FOR PRE-HEALTH STUDENTS

Please return the completed and signed evaluation form and your letter to the Pre-Health Advisor indicated on the Evaluation Form:

- Do not give your completed letter to the student for delivery.
- We can accept faxes or scanned pdf copies letters by email as long as they are on letterhead and have a signature.
- Please make note of the applicant’s decision to waive or not waive their right to see your letter. You are not obligated to write a letter for an applicant who has not waived their right to see your letter.

Introduction to letter writers:
The letter you are providing for this professional school applicant is an important component of his or her application, and we thank you for taking some of your valuable time to generate an informative letter of evaluation. Please do not hesitate to contact us with questions or concerns.

The value of your individual letter of evaluation
The Pre-Health Committee at Texas State will be generating a Committee Letter of Evaluation for this applicant. This committee letter is a composite letter summarizing the committee’s evaluation of the applicant’s preparation and readiness for professional school, and the evaluation form you have completed and letter you have written give us valuable insight into the applicant. Pre-Health Advisors may incorporate comments from your letter into the applicant’s committee letter. In addition, your letter (but not the evaluation form) will be forwarded to the professional schools the applicant is applying to, so admissions committees will also read your letter. We hope that you understand the importance of your letter to our Pre-Health Committee and to the professional school admissions committees.

General guidelines for your letter (these guidelines are optional and intended only to help you with your letter):
You can provide a single letter that will be used for all the schools the applicant is applying to. Using a generic “Dear Admissions Committee” type heading is fine. Please include a date on your letter. Give an explanation of your relationship with and length of time you’ve known the applicant. When possible, cite specific examples of the applicant’s abilities and achievements rather than using vague generalizations. When possible, give comparative information showing how the applicant compares with others you have known. Please provide us with your candid assessment of the likelihood for success of this applicant in medical or dental school and beyond as a health care provider. Please avoid commenting on the applicant’s physical appearance, marital status, religion, gender identity or other irrelevant qualities.

Here is some additional information that you should try to include in your letters of evaluation:

Instructors: comparative information about critical thinking skills; knowledge of the scientific process and comprehension of content; examples of leadership, interpersonal skills, oral and written communication skills, integrity, and motivation

Research or lab supervisors: comparative information about their reliability, independence, perseverance, discipline, curiosity, leadership; examples of competent laboratory technique, competence at instructing others, and ability to interpret data

Employers or volunteer coordinators: comparative information about reliability, empathy, maturity, compassion, moral character, professional appearance/poise, and integrity; examples demonstrating independence, good interpersonal skills, tolerance, good communication skills, and responsibility

Health care professionals: comparative information about compassion, attention to detail, curiosity about the career, motivation for medicine or dentistry, maturity, professionalism; examples of poise, communication skills, empathy, and interpersonal relationships; information about the nature (quality, duration, substance) of the health care experience the student has received with you
