Dee Fink's Taxonomy of Significant Learning

As we learned during his April 2012 visit to BYU-Idaho, Dee Fink advocates the expression of learning outcomes in terms of his six-part taxonomy.

- Foundational Knowledge - Understanding and remembering information and ideas.
  - Students will recognize and understand legal terminology.
  - Acquire in-depth knowledge of key concepts of virology.
- Application - Skills; critical, creative, and practical thinking; managing projects.
  - Students will be able to compare and contrast opposing legal principles, choose a position and defend it.
  - Students will demonstrate teamwork in preparing a complex project.
- Integration - Connecting ideas, people, realms of life.
  - Students will be able to apply legal principles to the accounting field.
  - Assess the contributions of virology to advances in science and medicine.
- Human Dimension - Learning about oneself, others.
  - Students use reflection and team feedback to identify areas where they have strengths and areas that need improvement.
  - Value the group learning environment.
- Caring - Developing new feelings, interests, values.
  - Students will want to apply legal and ethical knowledge to life events.
  - Understand the impact of viral disease on individuals and populations.
- Learning How to Learn - Becoming a better student; inquiring about a subject; self-directing learners.
  - Students will be able to do research to assess and apply court cases to legal issues.
  - Learn to think as a scientist.
