Biographical Note (compiled in 1992)

Neal Barrett, Jr. is a fourth-generation Texan born in San Antonio in 1929. He was raised in Oklahoma City, Oklahoma and acquired a degree from the University of Oklahoma's Professional Writing Program. Barrett began as a corporate writer in public relations but turned freelance when his works began to sell. A prolific writer of science fiction, Barrett has also written westerns, boys' adventure stories and historical novels. His short stories have appeared in major magazines such as Omni, Galaxy and Isaac Asimov's Science Fiction Magazine.

Barrett has also written under other names including: Victor Appleton, Chad Calhoun, Clay Dawson, Franklin W. Dixon, Rebecca Drury, Wesley Ellis, and J.D. Hardin. He lives in Austin, Texas.

Scope and Contents

The Neal Barrett, Jr. Papers span 1941 to 1992, the bulk of the material dating from 1973 to 1992. It is divided into two series: I. Works and II. Biography/Criticism. The first series contains research notes, manuscript drafts, correspondence with editors, and articles. The second series contains photographs, reviews, interviews and personal effects chronicling Barrett's writing career. The material is arranged in chronological order.
Series Descriptions

Series I: Works, 1941-1992
Boxes 1-3

This series contains manuscripts, research notes, correspondence with editors, magazines, reviews, and drawings. Some examples of the material that can be found here are: correspondence between the editor of Omni magazine and the author resulting in changes in the short story, "Diner"; research notes on the Big Thicket (used as a setting in two of Barrett's westerns, Snaketown and Lone Star and the Texas Gambler); and the different stages in the development of the comic book from the script, through the layout and rough drawings to the final product.

Box 3

This series includes book reviews, magazine and newspaper articles, fliers, photographs, and realia chronicling Barrett's life as a writer.

Neal Barrett, Jr.
Accession 2008-140

This donation in 2008 has been described as “fifty years of choice materials saved from Barrett’s writing career.” Material includes typed and handwritten manuscripts, panel layouts for his work that appeared in comic books, newspaper clippings of reviews, and limited correspondence mainly consisting of publishing agreements. Original file titles appear in quotation marks; some of the original folders with writing have been kept. Partial binding from several notepads with handwritten manuscripts was removed to eliminate further damage to adjacent pages from exposed staples; notepads whose binding was intact was left as such.
