Education Abroad at Texas State University strongly discourages incorporating the following high-risk activities in your study abroad program: off-road motorcycling; scuba diving; jet, snow or water skiing; bungee jumping; spelunking; white water rafting; surfing; or parasailing. Injury resulting from these activities is not covered by the University's existing insurance policy. Coverage of these activities require an additional premium, the cost of which would be borne by the student and faculty participants directly. Some high-risk activities may be allowed but the APD must demonstrate the strong academic relevance of the activity, and demonstrate that the activity can be carefully managed. Any program that does include high-risk activities must utilize a full-service provider.

I affirm that none of the proposed activities for my program/course are of high-risk.

I am requesting approval for the following high-risk activity.

Please describe of high-risk activity and academic relevance:

Please include on campus online/independent assignments and onsite class days.
