

Texas Alliance for Geographic Education

Evolution of TAGE

As of December 31, 2018, National Geographic Society will shut down the Geography Alliance program. They will redirect their resources into a new Education Network program.

Texas State Geography takes its responsibility to Texas teachers of geography and social studies very seriously. Therefore, as of January 1, 2019 the Texas Alliance for Geographic Education will continue its work under the Gilbert M. Grosvenor Center for Geographic Education in the Department of Geography, Texas State University. Maggie Hutchins will continue to be responsible for the day to day operations of TAGE.

TAGE has existed for more than three decades and has helped thousands of teachers. We intend to continue to work with you to serve geography education in Texas.

Sincerely,

Dr. Dick Boehm, Director, Gilbert M. Grosvenor Center for Geographic Education, and Jesse H. Jones Distinguished Chair in Geographic Education

Dr. Michael Solem, Associate Director, Gilbert M. Grosvenor Center for Geographic Education, and Senior Advisor for Geography Education at the American Association of Geographers

Dr. Alberto Giordano, Alliance Coordinator, Texas Alliance for Geographic Education, and Professor, Department of Geography

Dr. Yongmei Lu, Chair and Professor, Department of Geography
